

LISA CULP, M.S. ED.S.

As a director for five non-profit initiatives over the past twenty-five years, Lisa Culp has been involved in grant writing, designing and implementing successful programs to meet the needs of families and children.

With expertise in the areas of social justice, communication strategies, human development, and business leadership, Lisa Culp manages her own consulting business and is an experienced college instructor.

She has recently moved with her husband to the Billings, MT area, and with her graduate degrees in both Family Life and Adult & Organizational Learning and Leadership, she plans to continue her consulting and teaching work in an effort to both strengthen organizational capacities and impact student outcomes.

Lisa has also been involved with many anti-poverty efforts, including a three year opportunity working as the Director for the Bridge the Gap Project through a Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, serving under-resourced college students.

She was recently selected to present at TEDxLCSC: A Quest for Understanding. Her presentation titled Future Stories for Offenders can be viewed at: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RwImbgc6BqM>

Lisa believes that her life's purpose is to encourage others to use their gifts and abilities meaningfully and she seeks to embolden her students and audiences to discover and use those gifts daily.
